ANACHRONAUTS COME TO BATON ROUGE

ANACHRONAUTS, the techno-folk duo from New Orleans, has relocated to Baton Rouge and will be giving a free performance at Chelsea's Cafe and Daiquiri Bar in University Shopping Center on Tax Night--April 15th.

ANACHRONAUTS is a band not of hard rock, but of hard science. With original songs about plastic, perpetual motion, and the March of Progress, Anachronauts is bringing Baton Rouge Apocalypse Pop with a Kevlar vest and a gas mask-- and, by gosh, they still believe in Romance.

ANACHRONAUTS consists of LSU graduates Scott Burright and Stacey Hathaway Burright, who formed the group while living in New Orleans. Their drummer is an Alesis SR-16 drum machine. It welcomes bass player Jeff Wood, who is now being assimilated into the group.

ANACHRONAUTS performs monthly at the Neutral Ground Coffeehouse in New Orleans and has performed at The Howlin' Wolf, Muddy Waters' Music Club, and Native Naive Art Gallery.
